New Orleans Saints vs Atlanta Falcons NFL Predictions: The Saints are (4-4) off a bye week and a win over San Diego 37-32. QB Drew Brees went 30-for-41 for 339 yards and three touchdown passes against his former team to lead the Saints to victory. The Saints played the "home" team and the London crowd responded by giving them loud support and waving black New Orleans pennants. Marques Colston had two catches for 56 yards and Lance Moore had 90 yards receiving and 1 TD. The sports odds posted by the oddsmakers at Heroescasino.com currently list Atlanta Falcons -1 favorites to New Orleans Saints heading into this matchup. "This game was not about me proving a point or proving anybody wrong or saying they shouldn't have let me go," Brees said. "We beat a very good team today that needed a victory as badly as we did." "It was an important win," coach Sean Payton said. "I thought our players did a good job of handling some of the distractions, and some of the things that come up after a tough loss, and certainly the injuries. We were able to put that aside and still play a good team and get a win today, and that's encouraging."

The Falcons are (5-3) off a shut out win on the road beating Oakland 24-0 last week. QB Matt Ryan threw a pair of first-half touchdown passes to Michael Jenkins and the Falcons held the Raiders to negative yards and no first downs in the first half. Ryan was 17/22 for 220 yards and 2 TD's for the game. I must say, when I first looked at the schedule, I thought, "okay easy win", but now I am thinking, "I hope the Saints secondary shows up or Ryan will pick them apart"! Ryan is having a great rookie year! If he keeps going like he is for the rest of the season, I think he has a great chance to be rookie of the year! The online sports betting odds at Heroescasino.com has the OVER/UNDER in this New Orleans Saints vs Atlanta Falcons game is set at 49 points. NFL Predictions: This is a must win for Saints. last year, Atlanta was probably the worst team in the NFC. If Atlanta and Miami can turn things around in 1 year, the Saints should be able to also. On offense their great, defense needs work. The Saints need to put together 3 or 4 wins in a row or the season is over. I don't care who they play, they just need to get it done. The Falcons are undefeated at home, but 0-2 against divisional teams. Over is 9-1-1 in Saints last 11 games on field turf. Over is 8-1 in Saints last 9 games following a S.U. win.
