Chicago Bears vs Green Bay Packers NFL Predictions: The Bears (5-4) are off a loss last week 21-14 at home to Tennessee. QB Rex Grossman was 20/37 for 173 yards, 1 TD and 1 INT. The Titans won this game when Kyle Orton got hurt the previous weekend. The D wasn't good against the pass but only giving up 21 points when you are on the field for 34 minutes is nothing. Especially when the Titans' starting field position was the 50 yard line. Did anyone else notice that the Bears would have won this game with anyone but the 9-year old peewee league backup quarter back Rex Grossman? Great defense and the potential for a phenomenal win was wasted by a pathetic excuse for a quarterback. The sports odds posted by the oddsmakers at BetUS.com currently list Green Bay Packers -3.5 favorites to Chicago Bears heading into this matchup.

The Packers (4-5) are on a two game losing streak after last week's loss to Minnesota 28-27 on the road. QB Aaron Rodgers was 15/26 for 142 yards. The Packers' leaking front seven - they ranked 27th in the NFL in yards rushing allowed entering the game - suffered another setback when middle linebacker Nick Barnett limped off with what coach Mike McCarthy called a bruised right knee on the first series of the second half. I think Packer fans are underestimating the shoulder injury of Aaron Rodgers. He doesn't look right. I know he was pressured a lot vs. Vikes but he rarely went down field with a long pass. In reality, however, Packer fans should direct their frustration with the offensive line's ability to protect Rodgers. The online sports betting odds at BetUS.com has the OVER/UNDER in this Chicago Bears vs Green Bay Packers game is set at 43.5 points.

"It was a combination of we didn't do the fundamentals the way we know how to and me probably holding the ball a little too long," Rodgers said. "They did a great job. You've got to give them credit." NFL Predictions: QB Kyle Orton is back this week after the injury. Kyle Orton's first six completions this year were to six different receivers, his pocket presence and upfield vision are why he is so good this year. I think the performance of Aaron Rodger right out of the gate this year may have created unreasonable expectations not only for himself but the team as a whole. Let's remember, he is a first year starter. The Packers have yielded at least 115 yards rushing six times this season and have won just one of those contests. Bears are 4-1-1 ATS in their last 6 meetings. Bears are 7-3-1 ATS in their last 11 meetings in Green Bay. Over is 9-4 in the last 13 meetings in Green Bay.
