Venus Williams vs Dinara Safina 2009 Wimbledon Semifinal Betting Odds: As the scornful heat once again made its presence at Wimbledon on Monday, Venus Williams and Dinara Safina sizzled on the court to make their way to the semi-finals.

The defending champion was just about impeccable against Agnieszka Redwanska on Tuesday, as she conceded only one point on her serve on the first three service games, defeating her 6-1, 6-2. "She plays the ball so low and so fast, I'm happy to get through," humbly stated Williams about her rightful opponent.

After winning this 68 minute match, Venus advances to a semifinal match on Thursday with powerful server, Dinara Safina.

At Bodog.com, 2009 Wimbledon Betting Odds makers have projected Venus Williams [-550 ML] as a fourth round sports betting odds favorite against a very dangerous opponent in Dinara Safina [+350 ML].

Top seed, Dinara Safina, defeated 19-year-old German Sabine Lisicki on Tuesday 6-7 (5-7) 6-4 6-1 at Centre Court. Showing frustration Dinara had to be warned for racquet abuse early in the second set.

The Russian surely had to overcome a tough competitor in order to move forward at Wimbledon. The final set was worrying for Safina, but ultimately she came through. Safina suffered 15 double faults in this match, and will definitely have to bring her best game against Venus.

Venus Williams is looking to take her third consecutive title at Wimbledon. "I'm in the semi-finals of Wimbledon, it's where I want to be and I'm looking to go further."
